I think Microsoft will never change. I think the government is too slow to react to the largest computer software maker in the world. They have a lock on the desktop, you still cannot buy Linux preloaded from Dell, HP etc. Money is NOT the answer, if you cannot break them up, why spend all my tax dollars?? It all seems like another mass waste of my tax dollars (again).

Break them up in 3 parts, but since the "new" group of public servants decided not to seek that, Microsoft should have refund to us, over 100 bucks each, to any one who has bought a software package from them that cost 100 dollars or more In the last 3 years. The end user needs a large refund, if money is the only thing they understand.

Thanks for reading this!
